UPS Tips & Tricks Declared Value - What Does It Mean & Why You Should be Using It

What is Declared Value? Here is UPS' description: UPS' liability is limited to $100.00 on packages with no Declared Value. If the value of your goods exceeds $100.00, you can declare a higher value, up to $50,000.00 per package, by entering the declared value in the UPS shipping system used and paying an additional charge. Declared Value charges for freight collect and third-party shipments may be billed to your shipper account. For more information, refer to ups.com/terms.

Do you need to use the Declared Value option when sending UPS packages? You may. If the package you are sending has contents with a value below $100, then no. If your package is lost with UPS and it's contents are not worth more than $100, a claim can be filed and a reimbursement will be reviewed by the Claims Department. But, let's say your package exceeds a value of $100 - what happens if it is lost and you don't use a Declared Value? UPS can only reimburse up to $100 in this instance. If you know your package is valued at over $100 then it would be in your best interest to use the Declared Value option to make sure a claim will be paid in the event it is lost.

Where is the option located at in Campus Ship? See the photo below. You can enter in the Declared Value on Step 3. For more information or if you just have questions, contact us!
